THOMAS MORITZ, Postmaster.

The Summit, Robberies.

The numerous burglaries that have lately been committed in Summit became the subject of an executive session of the Township Committee last week, at which Anthony Comstock who resides in Summit, was commissioned to work for the apprehension of the robbers. Mr. Comstock's suspicions fell upon a man named Edward Reston, from something said unguardedly by his wife, who was employed as a domestic in Mr. J. D. Howe's family. On Sunday last, Comstock started out to arrest Reston, but he took to the woods and was gaining on his pursuer, when the latter drew a revolver and began firing at the fugitive. Reston led the officer through a swamp in hopes of eluding him, but the latter hung to the chase while his revolver kept up a merry fusillade. Several bullets whizzed so uncomfortably close to the fugitive that he stopped and surrendered unconditionally. He was taken to the lockup and placed in charge of Officers Edwards Kelley and Harry Rook.

The prisoner has made a full confession to Comstock, but, as two Summit people are implicated, the particulars of the story are being guarded so as not to afford the suspects an opportunity to escape. The officers informed a News reporter that a wagon-load of stolen goods had been found, while other booty had been unearthed in the woods.

Reston is said by the officers to have laid bare a plot to rob several of the finest residences in Summit. It is believed that he has been promised immunity from punishment for turning State evidence.

Mrs. Reston has been discharged from Mr. Howe's employ.

Orange.

The Central Labor Union of Orange has decided to start a co-operative store for the sale of general merchandise. Stock to the amount of $15,000 will be issued in shares of $5 each, and no one will be allowed to hold more than ten shares. As soon as $5,000 is subscribed the store will be opened.

The New Jersey Association of Congregational churches will hold its annual convention in the Orange Valley Congregational church on May 10, 11 and 12, opening on the evening of May 10, with a sermon by the Rev. C. H. Everest of Newark. The association includes not only the Congregational churches in this State but those of Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia, about sixty in all, each being represented by its pastor and two laymen.

Sabina Hanley, said to be the oldest Irish woman in Orange, died at her home in Mechanic street on Saturday, being nearly ninety years of age. She leaves a son and daughter, both unmarried.

Postmaster Norman L. Burghardt, of South Orange, took possession of his new office corner of South Orange avenue and Vose avenue, Monday morning. He has retained Miss Mary E. Smith as deputy.

Livingston.

About thirty of the most extensive milk raisers of Livingston, West Livingston, Hanover and Northfield, held a meeting in the West Livingston M. E. Church, Tuesday evening, with Isaac S. Crane in the chair, to consider the advisability of establishing a creamery in that vicinity. Mr. Kimball, of Vermont, who is thoroughly acquainted with the workings of such an establishment, made a long but interesting address, giving his experience with creameries established and conducted on the co-operative plan, and he showed that many advantages were obtained for the milk raisers. The proposition was favorably considered by the meeting and a committee, consisting of Messrs. George Cook, Bern Dickinson and Jeptha H. Baldwin, was appointed to take the matter under consideration.

Brown and his wife happened to be in the depot when an emigrant train came in. As the newly-arrived foreigners in their picturesquely dirty costumes emerged from the train his wife asked: "What are all these people, Henry?" "That's a job lot of American citizens just come in," was the reply.—Merchant Traveler.

Human Nature.

"You dropped a copper in the straw," said a horse-car conductor to a pompous-looking old gentleman the other day.

"Dropped what?" asked the bereft passenger.

"A copper. I saw it fall."

"Oh, well," was the indifferent reply, "I guess a copper will neither make nor break me; still—"

He began poking around in the straw with his cane.

"It glanced off to the left," said the conductor, stooping over and stirring the straw with his hand.

"Oh, it's of no consequence, no consequence at all," said the loser; "a copper is nothing; however, one might as well—" He dropped down on one knee and stirred the straw carefully.

"I think it fell to the left," volunteered a passenger.

"Oh, did it? Thanks. A copper don't amount to anything, but then—" He put on his glasses and scraped the straw away until he came to the car floor. Then he looked up and said, foolishly:

"It's of no consequence, no consequence at all; but then——you didn't happen to see it fall, did you, sir?"

The passenger appealed to said:

"I think it struck the edge of the seat and glanced off toward the door."

"Oh, did it? Quite likely. Thanks," and the loser crawled carefully to the door on his hands and knees, patting the straw with both hands, and saying:

"It makes very little difference whether I get it or not; none at all, in fact; still I might as well—ah, here it is—no."

The glad look died out of his face as he cast aside the flat button he had picked up, thinking it was his copper.

He turned and crawled back toward his seat, plowing up the straw with both hands.

"Oh, well," he said, as he peered as far as he could under the skirts of a lady who had sat next him, "a copper is but a trifle after all; still I—would you mind moving over a little, madame? It might have fallen here, you know! sorry to trouble you for such a trifle, but then—"

He made the straw fly for about five minutes; then he rose slowly and sadly to his feet, stirred around with his cane, and finally sat down saying:

"It is of no consequence. Not the least. Let it go. A copper is—ah, there it is!"

He bounded half the length of the car and grabbed up a handful of straw in which there was—a brass tobacco tag.

The joyous light died out of his eyes. He sank back in his seat dejectedly; but he tried to grin, and again said:

"It is of no consequence, not the least."

"Fifty-ninth street," cried the conductor.

"Great Scott!" shouted the copperless man, "I ought to have got off a mile back of here. Here, let me off!"—Tid Bits.

It Did Him Good.

Side by side in the waiting-room of the Third street passenger station yesterday sat a nervous little woman and a tall, melancholy man. The woman had a boy about seven years of age, who seemed to be possessed of an evil spirit. He would not sit nor stand still. He didn't want apples nor candy. He couldn't be coaxed nor bribed to behave himself, and his kicking and whining seemed to wear the little woman out. The melancholy man stood it for awhile, but finally felt called upon to observe:

"Madam, I know what that child is aching for."

"Yes, so do I" she promptly answered; "but I've a boil on my right arm."

"I'll take the job off your hands if you say so. It's sumthin' I've been in the habit of doing almost every day of my life, for I've had three wives and three sets of children."

The boy set up an extra howl and began kicking her shins just then, and she looked around in a helpless way and said:

"Well, you may try. Not too vigorous, but just vigorous enough."

He reached over and picked the child up and laid him across his knee, and the spanking machine started off at about forty revolutions a minute and worked to a charm.

"There—you sot there!" said the old man as he straightened the boy up and sat him down. "That's better than all the candy and peanuts in the country, and you'll behave yourself for the next three days."

The boy blubbered softly and sat still, and when the mother bowed her gratitude the old man replied:

"Oh, don't mention it. It's the best medicine in the world. Besides, I was a bit lonesome to-day, and it has sort o' cheered me up."—Detroit Free Press.
